

The Food, Land & Water Project is a bold initiative to bring together varied stakeholders for honest, respectful conversation and collaboration. The project started in 2016 with smaller meetings of representative stakeholders who have met in workgroups focused on selected topics: surface water quality, groundwater quality, groundwater quantity, and the future of Wisconsin working lands. Each of the four workgroups will present a report of their collaborative efforts at the conference. Attendees will have a chance to listen, discuss, build new connections and working relationships, and think about our shared resources in a more systematic and collaborative way.
